GEO. T. G. WHITE, Southern Masager. Every Policy issued by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States becomes "indisputable," after being in

orce for three years. TWENTY ANNUAL PAYMENT LIFE POLICY, WITH TONTINE APPLI-CATION FOR TWENTY YEARS, CALLED THE TONTINE

SAVINOS FUND POLICY. ESTIMATED RESULTS. Amount, $1,000; Age, 30; Annual Pay-ments of $30.36. Total Premiums paid in 20 years, $607.20 Reserve on Policy in 20 years, $467.00; Accumulated Divi lends in 20 years, $631.00-

04 per cent.; Total cash value in 20 years, $1.098.00- 180 per cent. You pay $30.36 annually for 20 years, and in case of death prior to that period, your heirs wil receive $1,000, which is certainly a very large return for the money paid If, however, you live to the end of the 20 years, you will have two privileges, either one of which you may elect.

First-Terminate your insurance by withdrawing the total cash value of your Policy, $1,0 8 00, which is the amount of the reserve and accumulated dividends added together, being equivalent to return-ing you $180 for every $100 paid, besides your insurance of $1,000 tor 20 years.
Second—Withdraw, in cash, your accumulated dividends, $631, which is 104 per cent. of the premiums paid, and besides receive a paid-up policy for $1,000, payable at death, upon which no further premium will be required, but, on the contrary, this paid-up policy will yield annual dividends. There is no surrender or paid-up value to this policy until the expiration of the Tontine period. Thirty days' grace is allowed for the payment of premiums on this policy, but when taken, a fine or interest, at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, will be required.

It affords me great pleasure in calling the attention of my friends and the public the attention of my friends and the public in general to the prominent position now held by the Equitable Life Assurance So-ciety of the United States, which I have the honor of representing. To obtain a full and perfect knowledge of the workings of this immense institution, I would respectfully refer you to the examination of the leaflet "Facts," lately published by the Society, and which is in general circulation, but I desire especially now to invite all those who have not yet insured, as well as those who are contemplating additional insurance, to examine carefully the operations of the " Tontine Savings Fund Policy," which are practically explained above.
Those of my old friends I take it for granted are sufficiently satisfied that it is to their interest to carry policies of assurance, but there is a large number of young men now coming upon the stage of life who are to take our places, and who will require especially the aid offered by sound and well-conducted Life Assurance (ompanies in providing against death as well as mature area. To all such is this plan of assurance. providing against death as well as mature age. To all such is this plan of assurance particularly adapted. Many of these policies which have had a shorter period to run are now maturing, and the results prove that no other plan of assurance can or ever has produced such favorable returns. Is there any young man from the age of 18 to 30 who cannot afford to lay aside every year the small sum of $30.36? This amount will secure a policy of $1,000 payable at death, and it is estimated that it will pay the same amount at the end of the twenty years. In a word, this investment obviates the necessity of a savings bank, because in case of death it accomplishes at once what would require the savings of a life-time.

COMPLEX CONUNDRUM COLLOQUIALLY CONSIDERED. BY WALDORF H. PHILLIPS.

We beg leave to anno mee that we have published, under the above title, a very novel and remarkable work. It is, in the form of fiction, a bumorous and powerful satire on Divorce Laws and their complications. The author takes for his text "Do you take this woman to be your wife—intil you are divorced?
"Do you take this man to be your hus band—until you change your mind?

"Then, they whom I unite, let some Court put asunder."
The work is full of humor and keen satire; it is decidedly a most original and novel addition to American publications, and it is confidently believed will prove the literary sensation of the year. THE UNIVERSITY.

An education to be worth much as a force or as a power in this day must be largely practical.

It has long been one of the popular prejudices against our higher literary Institutions that they failed to prepare men for the actual duties of life, that they sent out brag scholars with their heads full of dead languages and recondite sciences who could not distinguish between the soils of their fathers' plantations, nor name the plants, or birds, or trees of their native forests, nor keep the books of a cross-roads store, nor draw the plot of a field, nor the plan of a barn, and who had not even a decent acquaintance with their own language or its history, nor with the history of their own land, or the race from which they sprung. These charges were often recklessly made, and often injustice was done, for the soil that has been well stirred and well fertilized is ready or any crop. But still there was truth underlying, even in the old days when there was less peremptory need of practical science, and when our young men could better afford to "wait awhile" before commencing the serious business of life, than is possible now. What is imperatively demanded now is a school of every-day art, of every-day science, of every-day industry. Whatever tends to assist in the great work of developing the resources of the State, and fits men for such vocations as this work implies in all its commercial, agricultural and mechanical industries is now chiefly valuable. The school that offers such preparation most freely, and without neglecting or in the slightest degree undervaluing the old classical curriculum, the drill in languages and the higher walks of Science and Letters. without which true scholarship is never attained nor even possible, yet furnishes the most ample opportunity to master those studies in natural science, in commercial arithmetic, and the laws that regulate our social fabric-such a school must be said to come nearest supplying the present demand in the educational market. We know of no school in the South that so nearly meets these requirements as the University of North Carolina, Turning to its annual catalogue for information, and conferring with its principal guardians and officers, we find an array of opportunities offered our studious and ambitious young men such as no Southern Institution has ever yet equalled. This is our only Institution whose age is coeval with that of North Carolina as a State. In 1776, in the very midst of the war for Independence, and again in 1789 when North Carolina entered the American Union, her delegated guardians in framing her first Constitution declared that a "University in which all useful learning should be encouraged and promoted, must be established and supported by permanent funds". In 1792 its present site was chosen, a situation now as then unique for beauty, healthfulness and purity of air. Since the first corner-stone was laid by Governor DAVIE the buildings have increased in number, till there are now eight, affording ample accommodations for five hundred students, which number it had nearly attained at the breaking out of the civil war. With the exception of a short interval of silence and prostration since the war. the University has, for the 85 years of its working existence, done its work in a way to command the confidence and respect of our people and to make its influence felt in every part of the Union.

A comparison of the different courses of study now offered there with the old curriculum under Governor SWAIN shows in all points an advance fully commensurate with the demands of a new age of thought and action. We will indicate a few of the most prominent, novel, and practical features. Constitutional and international law, and political economy, are taught by President BATTLE. Governor SWAIN taught these, and in addition, Moral Philosophy and Metaphysics. In these days a Professor's hands are well occupied who teaches Metaphysics alone. How does President BATTLE manage his school of Political Science? In Constitutional Law his course embraces a thorough drill in the Constitution of the United States, illustrated by the citation of important cases decided by the United States Supreme Court which serve to impress the principles of the Constitution upon the minds of his students. The DRED SCOTT case, the Granger cases, the Dartmouth College cases. &c. &c., were all reviewed, and in almost every case Mr. BATTLE has directed the attention of his class to the lawvers who argued, and the judges who decided. A series of lectures on North Carolina Constitutional History were given, beginning with the Convention of 1776, and coming down to to that of 1875, together with a history of the Lords Proprietors, and their system of government, and of the Colonial and State Governors, their characters, successes and failures. The young men who left the University this June had had a course of instruction in this department never before attempted there, and such as only a leading lawyer and one well versed duction in point of expense since our day be very near the truth.

almost every department of literature could have furnished.

Nor were they less highly favored as regards International Law and Political Economy. The great principles that regulate national intercourse and national life and prosperity received continual illustration by anecdote and instance taken from a wide range of reading or of experience. The history of United States coins and currency, of State and National Banks and Banking, of Public Debts, of Credit and Exchange, and the great Commercial Crises of the civilized world-these were topics on which the President dwelt at length and in a most admirable and instructive manner. In Parliamentary Law, too, the class was well drilled. From last September to the present June Mr. BATTLE's instructions to the class of 1880 formed a series of exhaustive lectures on subjects necessary to be learned by every man of intelligence and useful to every citizen in every department of active life.

In Natural History entirely new ground has been broken. Dr. SIMONDS was pupil of AGASSIZ, and came to North Carolina from Cornell. His lectures on Zoology, Physiology and Botany are not only scientific in a very thorough and masterly way, but directly practical in tendency and effect. His constant use of the blackboard forces thoroughness and fami liarity with the subject, whether plant or animal, upon his pupils. Human Physio logy and Hygiene receive especial attention in a course of twenty-five lectures abso lutely unique in interest. In Mineralogy and general Geology most of the minerals taken for analysis were those of North Carolina, and during the last term his class were obliged to spend six hours a week with the blow-pipe, being made familiar with the tests for iron, gold, silver, copper, many of the calcites, &c., &c., and towards the close of a very thorough course Dr SIMONDS delivered a series of lectures or North Carolina climate, soils, botany, geo logy. &c. There were no glittering gene ralities about it. Every locality mentioned was produced upon the blackboard map. If any member of the class of 1880 should profess ignorance of the Cranberry iron bed and the quality of its ore, of the formation of the Deep River coal fields, or of the locality and nature of our old deposits, it can never be the fault of this indefatigable Professor. We fully believe that nowhere in the South are these branches taught a at the University of North Carolina.

In Mathematics the course extends over five years. There is one year which pre cedes the first year in the College of Math ematics (p. 27, catalogue,) and is especially branches relating to agriculture and the mechanic arts, and who take the scientific course of the University. Elementary algebra, practical arithmetic, and book keeping, are the studies pursued, and the course is open to all students who particularly design to fit themselves for business This class has been popular, and found to meet the wants of many young men. The four years of the College of Mathematics succeed this course. The third year is devoted chiefly to the calculus and its applications, and is not necessarily required in any course, but may be substituted for any other study in any of the courses. Besides the studies of the four years another practical course is offered. 1. Land surveying, leveling, and the elements of railroad engineering. 2. Mechanical drawing and projections. Great pains are taken to make this course eminently practical by work in the field and on paper so as to ensure accurate surveyors and competent draughtsmen.

In the department of English, the language is studied as never before. Great attention is given to rhetoric in every year. and to the arts of criticism and of writing good English. In the junior year special forms of composition are taught, and the senior year is devoted successively to the history of words, the history of the language, and the history of its literature The student is drilled in the general outlines of history and especially that of modern Europe. A post-graduate course consists of special studies in English and Continental literature. The Medical School lately established is an attraction, and offers advantages in opportunity for Laboratory work, and attendance on Dr. SIMONDS' Lectures and the general lectures on Chemistry, &c., &c., that are not only invaluable, but rare. Special studies in practical anatomy and climical consultations among the poor of the community, who receive medical treatment on these occasions free of charge, may be ranked among the advantages. Such preliminary instruction is seldom offered our inland medical students.

In connection with the extensive Chemical Schools and Laboratories of the University may be mentioned the admirably equipped Experiment Station, whose reports, methods of work, collections, &c., &c., are always open to inquirers and present a really magnificent field for observation and stimulus to practical work in the direction of agricultural chemistry.

Special attention is paid to the study of German, and to the comparative philology of the English and German languages. Vocal music was taught all through the last year. The enumeration grows upon us as we consult our notes, while our lessening space warns us to conclude. We must add, 168,000. The figures may be changed by at Chapel Hill. Board is obtained in the clubs at less than $7 a month, and the total annual expenses may be comprised within $170, by a prudent and economical young man. This is another important point among the many at our University on which we feel disposed to congratulate the public. We are inclined to think that the students of the University Normal School first demonstrated to Chapel Hill people the possibility of living decently, and with wholesome sufficiency, on five or six dollars a month. The example was a good one, and has been followed. Our young people are just a trifle disposed to be self-indulgent and pleasure loving, and every move towards practical economy and self-denial for the sake of self-improvement, is a step towards a higher life : "Self reverence, self-knowledge, self-control, These three alone lead life to sovereign power."

CINCINNATI.

The Democratic National Convention meets at Cincinnati on Tuesday next, at noon, to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States. Excluding territorial representatives, who will have seats, but no voice in its deliberations, the convention will be composed of 738 delegates, and 492 votes will be necessary for the nomination of candidates. The indications are that the convention will complete its labors in two days. The only contest to be settled will be from New York, where a full set of Tammany delegates will appear to contest the seats of the delegation recognized by the State Executive Committee as regularly chosen. The Tammany party claim to be sanguine that at least one-half of their delegation will be admitted, which would, perhaps, prove a fatal blow to Mr. Tilden, as it would deprive him of 35 of the 70 votes east by New York. On the other hand, the anti-Tammany party charge their opponents with being bolters, and scout the idea that the Tammany men will succeed in obtaining a standing in the Convention. Two sets of delegates were also chosen in Massachusetts, but the opposing factions in that State have, it is stated, amicably adjusted their differences, and thus terminated that contest. The Democratic conventions invariably enforce the unit rule where it is ordered by States, and there will be nothing of that nature to contend over.

Last evening's Herald foots up the delegates as divided thus: For TILDEN 184; BAYARD 120; SEYMOUR 85; HAN-COCK 66; THURMAN 65; RANDOLPH 18; FIELD 60; ENGLISH 3; HENDRICKS 39; Morrison 25; doubtful 29; scattering 12. In this estimate, New York's 70 votes are Wayne, given to Mr. TILDEN. Should the Tammany men be admitted to an equal share, as they claim will be done. Mr. TILDEN would lose 35 of the votes to which he is entitled by the action of the New York Convention. But we anticipate no such action by the Convention. Many leading members of the Convention are already in Cincinnati, and a telegram to the New York Evening Post says that "the appearance of Kelly and his Tammany "scalpers" is coming to be looked on by the nost respectable representatives of the party here as a piece of unblushing effronery and assurance. KELLY proclaims his intention to oppose TILDEN if the latter shall be nominated, and this is regarded by Democrats generally as an impudent attempt on the part of Tammany to dictate to the party throughout the nation. It is remembered that KELLY last autumn caused the defeat of the whole Democratic ticket in New York by his endeavor to harm Robinson. Thinking Democrats here say that any man or faction which brings such a disaster on a State ticket has no business to come to a national convention with grievances and threats.

THE APPROPRIATIONS made at the late session of Congress are elsewhere stated. We are not disposed, as some of our contemporaries seem, to complain of them. The money is collected and it is very well to put it into circulation again. What we do complain of, and what we shall have to complain of until Congress has a working majority of Democrats, is the collection of the money which is spent. It comes out of poor people, who study night and day. from January to December, to feed and school the children and make both ends neet out of their narrow incomes. It is raised by charging a tariff of about 75 per cent. on spool cotton-making the poor mothers pay sixty or seventy cents per dozen for spools, when, but for the tariff. they would get the dozen for twenty-five cents. It is raised by charging a tax of one cent upon every box of matches, when, but for the tax, you would buy the whole for less than a cent per box. It is raised by a thousand such wrongs which take the hope of gain and growth from the poor.

Cincinnati.

[Telegrams to the N. Y. Times, 18th.]

CINCINNATI, June 17.—The one great incertain quantity in the contest about to open here is his strength, and upon every and inquiring politicians are met by the mestion: "How many votes will Tilden have; how many votes will he control. over which he has no pretended control and if he does not secure the nomination himself, to whom will he throw his Tilden's friends, in his behalf, will seek he nomination, if there is any reasonable possibility of securing it, and they will gracefully abandon the field if they become convinced that the "great reformer is not one of the possibilities. While this is the present situation, it is not to be disputed that Mr. Tilden, during the past few days, has been, and is now, making the most desperate efforts to secure the nomination. It is most significant that nearly all the prominent Southern and Western delegates who have thus far arrived here made their trip to Cincinnati by way of New York, and held long, and apparently most satisfactory, consultations with Mr Tilden. It is noticeable, also, that many of those who have been spoken of as dark horses, represented by their friends here oudly demand recognition, upon the ground at they are stanch friends, and, possibly. legatees of Tilden. Regarding Mr. Thurman's candidacy it need only be said that his Ohio friends are much more confident in his behalf than is any disinterested out side observer. As to Mr. Hendricks, it might as well be understood at the outset that he is hardly one of the possibilities but there is no doubt that, despite his many declarations to the contrary, he would under a certain circumstance, have no ob jection to serving his party again as a canlidate for the Vice-Presidency, the certain circumstance in question being the not tio Seymour for the first place. In the anti-Tilden States of the South Senator Bayard's name is much more popular than that of any other candidate mentioned.

In a few words, the solution may be summed up as follows: Tilden is feared and courted by every one. Seymour is regarded as the candidate who may be put through on a wave of popular applause, while shrewd politicians are predicting the success of some minor candidate, who will we his nomination to a combination of various conflicting elements. As to the luration of the convention, it can be said. for the relief of those who so impatiently watched the proceedings of the Chicago meeting, that it is not likely to last longer than two days.

THE GOLDEN HAIR-PIN.

A DETROIT FREE PRESS ROMANCE.

George Adolphus Clarendon was a young man of pleasing presence, whose age was not far from 20 years. His father had long and successfully conducted a most exemplary meat-market at the corner of Market and St. Clair streets, in the thriving Village of Westford, in Central New York, and had amassed a competence by fair and honorable means. But the son held the meat business in abhorrence, and steadfastly refused to entertain the thought of following it for a livelihood. He conceived himself to be formed of a quality of clay quite above the average, and was often heard muttering incoherently in his sleep about the "higher walks of life." Old Mr. Clarendon was a stern father, and he determined that if George Adolphus would not sell meat, he should be compelled to engage in the distribution of tracks, with the heels toward the paternal mansion. George Adolphus accepted the peripatetic alternative with cheerful alacrity, and went on an aimless tramp. He said he was going in search of his proper

Maud Muller was the only child of a retired banker in the sleepy Town of Cou-ponville, an aristocratic village in one of the eastern counties of Ohio. Maud's charms, both physical and mental, were the rarest ever lavished upon woman, and she had been favored with every advantage of education that money could purchase. Her beauty and accomplishments had made her the idol of a large circle of young men, to not one of whom she had ever given the slightest encouragement. They swarmed under her chamber windows on moonlight nights and made the long hours hideous with their caterwaulings, until old Muller got tired of it and stole around the corner of the house with a gun loaded with tenpenny nails and let drive at the flock, killing three outright and wounding four others so that they died on the following morning. That was the kind of man Mr. Muller was; but he was exceedingly fond of his daughter, and had always been kind to her.

One evening as Maud was emerging from her boudoir, where she had been scrutinizing a large mirror and dressing for the opera, she was met by her father with the information that Mr. Muggleton waited in the parlor.

Now Mr. Muggleton was an ancient fossil who had taken a great fancy to Maud, and as he was a man of high social standing and great wealth, Mr. Muller had thought best to encourage him as much as possible, hoping that his daughter would have the good sense to offer no objection on account of age.

"Mr. Muggleton is waiting." repeated Mr. Muller. "Well, give him my compliments, and tell him to keep on waiting," returned Maud, with some spirit. "But don't you intend to go down

Are you going to be rude?" "O, yes," replied Maud, with an injured air, "I'll go down and stroke hi shiny old bald head and ask him about his children and his grandchildren, and I'll ask him to give me some personal recollections of Noah. And, if you like, I'll go to the opera with him, and I'll ask him if there was better talent on the boards when he and Methuselah were young!" "Now, Maud," said Mr. Muller, "you are making a fool of yourself. Mr. Mug-gleton never saw Noah in his life. As to grandchildren, you know very well that he a bachelor, and hasn't a relative in the world, so far as he knows. I command you to present yourself at once, and if you don't behave properly, there will be a young lady about your size begging her bread in the streets before she is aware

With these words the indignant father turned on his heel and left Maud to choose which alternative she would.

While the events above narrated were ranspiring, a young man possessing a dignified bearing and eighty-five cents in money, was just entering the brilliantly lighted town of Couponville in search of his level. It was a larger town than he had ever before seen, and he was consequently somewhat dazzled and bewildered He began to be doubtful about finding his level that night, as the evening was rapidly wearing away, and another question was beginning to trouble him, namely: How was he going to reach the higher walk of life without more money? How was he to be a high-toned gentleman and live in loftier atmosphere than that which pervaded the meat shops with so small a sum as eighty-five cents in his pocket? As he walked gloomily along the strange thoroughfare, busy with these troublesome relections, he heard loud tones issuing from mansion which he was just passing. A moment later the door opened and a slight female figure hurried silently out into the street, and, passing by him with a quick determined tread, was soon out of sight.

When Maud recovered from the shock which her father's angry words had given her, she immediately determined upon a course of action. She resolved that she would be turned out of doors before she would consent to go to the opera with the antediluvian relic, who waited for her in the parlor. She called her father back and told him her determination. The result was that the proud young beauty was promptly ejected through the hall door; for she it was who had passed George Adolphus as he wandered on in search of

When Mr. Muggleton had waited for Maud until he was tired and on the point of leaving, Mr. Muller entered the room, and apologizing for the non-appearance of his daughter by saying that she had a vio-lent headache, begged him to come again in a few days, as Maud would then be delighted to see him. The truth was that Mr. Muller had no idea of punishing his daughter's disobedience with permanent banishment. He reasoned that she would surely go to some of her friends and return in penitence in the morning.

George Adolphus followed swiftly on after the young lady, hardly knowing why he did so, but feeling irresistibly drawn by some unaccountable presentiment that all was not well with her. In a few moments he came up with her and followed at a little distance, watching her movements with the distance was a distance with the distance was a distance watching her movements with the distance was a distance watching her movements with the distance was a dista the keenest interest. But Maud was so intent upon some purpose which lay deep hidden in her heart that she did not notice him. The street now began to be deserted, but still the resolute girl walked rapidly on. At length a small foot-bridge across the canal was reached. The girl paused. Was her purpose a desperate one? George Adolphus asked himself this question and many more beside as he lingered in the shadows close behind her.

Murmuring something to the effect that the heaving, white-crested billows which rolled at her feet would soon embrace her and free her from her wretchedness, Maud began to take down her hair.

"Going to swim?" asked a voice behind

She turned and beheld a stranger standing close at hand. At first she could not utter a word. Presently, however, she said in tones that betrayed her intense excitement:

"Oh. sir. do not thwart my purpose. desire to put an end to my troublewish to sleep beneath the wave."

"There isn't any wave there," said George Adolphus. "The canal's dry. You'll break your neck if you jump off this bridge.'

"But I want to find a grave in the restless deep. I want the blue billows to fold me in everlasting slumber where the sea-weeds grow in sunless gloom.

"But I tell you, my dear lady, there isn't any restless deep anywhere around here. You'd better put it off till the canal opens. Here you are talking about sleeping beneath the billows, when the water won't be let on in a month yet. And besides, if you want to be folded in ever-lasting slumber, it would be wise for you to jump into a well. You'd have a sure "That would be horrib'e!" exclaimed Maud, with a shudder.

"Yes," replied George Adolphus; "i would spoil the well."

Maud felt that George Adolphus was right. True, he did not appear to enter very much into the tragic spirit of the situation. He ought to have dropped upon his knees and implored her to forget her trouble and sip a little longer the nectar of life. He ought to have pictured to her imagination a fair-haired girl lying with pallid face and marble form in the silent bosom of the canal, where the dolphin sports unseen and the mermaids comb their ocks in shadowy solitude. But he did nothing of the sort. He told her to go nome and practice in the cistern.

Maud thought the matter over for moment, then bursting into tears she wrung the hand of our hero and ran swiftly

George Adolphus stood upon the bridge and watched Maud till she was out of sight. As he stood there, wondering what it was that weighed so heavily upon the mind of this fair young girl, he saw something glittering at his feet. He stooped and eagerly picked it up. It was a golden hair-pin, of peculiar pattern. It occurred to him at once that it must have been lost by the girl, when she took down her hair. He put it in his trousers pocket, thinking that it would be a handy thing give his consent, too. tried to forget about this fair girl, and the previous circumstances under which he had met her, the more persistently they rose before him. Presently he found himself laying plans to find out more about her, and then it dawned upon him that he was in love. He then tenderly removed the hair-pin from his trousers pocket and placed it next his heart. It was now getting very late, and the police were beginning to glance suspiciously at our hero, and so he turned into a more retired street and determined to search for a cheap lodging place.

Old Mr. Muggleton, whom we left at the residence of Maud's father, wended his way homeward, filled with bitter disappointment. He had long regarded Maud with tenderness, and had desired to offer her his hand and fortune, and now he felt that he was rejected. He had seen nearly four-score years of bachelorhood, and it was getting monotonous. He dragged himself wearily and sadly home and retired to his couch in wretchedness

The clock had just struck 11, and the own was as silent as the grave. when two villainous looking men, with muffled faces broke open the street door of a large mansion where an ancient bachelor la dreaming of a supercilious maiden wh had declined to meet him in her parlor a few hours before. The men passed safely into the house, and were soon standing by the bedside of the dreamer. A moment later a swift blow fell upon the unconscious millionaire; but before it could be repeated the assassin was stricken to the oor. His companion escaped. The police were summoned by the servants, who had by this time been aroused by the noise, and the captured man was led away in

"Who is this young man that has fol lowed these villains and risked his life to save mine?" asked the wounded man.

"My name is George Adolphus Clarendon," was the prompt reply,
"George Adolphus," said the millionaire, "you have done a brave and noble deed. I am mortally wounded, and I must die in a few hours, but you shall be rewarded. You shall be my heir.'

The next morning there was crape or the door of the Muggleton mansion, and George Adolphus was a millionaire. He had been suddenly landed in the lap of luxury. He could not have been more completely taken by surprise if he had suddenly succeeded to the English crown. yet his magical elevation to wealth and position did not so engage his mind as to dispel certain memories that were lingering there-memories that carried him back to the foot-bridge across the canal. Who was this beautiful stranger that had almost made the canal bridge a "bridge of sighs?" Why had she sought a watery grave? And if she wanted to rid herself of sorrow, why didn't she jump off a house, instead of hunting up a dry canal, full of broken glass, iron and old boots? These questions were too much for George Adolphus. In less than a week he found himself in a perfect fever of mental excitement. He felt that he was growing rapidly worse. It did seem as if he could not get that hair pin near enough to his heart. He thought of swallowing it, but changed his mind and

and when he read a newspaper the lines all seemed to commence with capital letter and end with a jingle.

Thus the weeks passed wearily by with. out bringing the slightest intelligence of the owner of the golden hair in.

In a brilliantly-lighted ball-room in Conponville; gayest of the gay, and admired of all admirers, Maud Muller promenaded to and fro like a fairy queen. Her wretch edness had departed with old Mr. Muggle. ton, but she had not forgotten the night when a stranger had rescued her from selfdestruction, and she secretly longed to know who it was that had saved her from herself. She closely scanned every gentleman that entered the room, as if in half frightened expectancy. She had heard of Mr. Clarendon, the young millionaire, but as he had not appeared much in society, she had not met him. Of course she was not curious, for she was a woman, and women are not curious; yet she could not feel easy after learning that Mr. Muggle. ton's heir was present, till she had signified her willingness to have him presented.

As George Adolphus advanced, arm in arm with an acquaintance, a perceptible pallor overspread Maud's countenance. Was it caused by the peculiar pin that ornamented his shirt bosom? She tried to convince herself that the pin signified nothing. Perhaps he had picked up the hairpin in the street on that eventful evening she so well remembered. But when she heard his voice she withered like a stricken flower. George Adolphus was puzzled. "So were all the by-standers. It was a very singular case, indeed, they all said. Presently, however, Maud rallied. as she and George Adolphus were left

"Do you remember me?" she asked. falteringly. "Do you remember having seen me before?"

Suddenly the truth flashed upon George Adolphus like a national convention bulle

"Yes," he replied, making an effort to control himself, "I remember a former meeting with you very well." "I think papa would give his consent."

said Maud, very timidly. "But you are not going to try it again?"

said George Adolphus in surprise.
"O, dear, no!" exclaimed Maud, "1 don't mean that. I think papa would give his consent to—that is—I don't think he'd object."

"Object to what?" asked George Adol phus, blandly. "O, dear!" exclaimed Maud.

"Do you mean to say," continued George Adolphus, "that you don't think the old man would object to your trying it. again after the water is let on?" "No," said Maud. "I don't mean that,

for he is very fond of me, and I am sure he would be glad to encourage so worthy -that is-O, what am I saying?" Then George Adolphus began to see how the land lay; but as a ball-room is not a favorable place for a tableau, he mastered his impulse to eatch Maud in his arms and merely observed in a whisper that she was a gem of the first water, and that he would when Maud and Adolphus entered the house, and the young man was soon prostrate at his feet, clasping him tightly about the legs and imploring his permission to marry his daughter. "Ahem!" remarked Muller. George Adolphus thought this rather meaningless remark was a favorable induetion, and so squeezed the old man's legs harder than before. "Come, young man," said Mr. Muller you are filling my slippers with tears.

Rise up and let go my legs." "Oh, do you give your consent?" sobbed George Adolphus. "Consent!" roared the old banker.

"heavens and earth! Of course I do. Here, Maud, take this lunatic away and get me a dry pair of socks." And they were happy ever afterward.

Ben Hill, by Wade Hampton.

The lines which Wade Hampton, in the Senate last week, applied to Ben Hill are taken from Dryden's character of George Villiers, the second Duke of Buckingham, which ranks with the character of Shaftes bury in the same poem, and Pope's satire on Addison, as masterpieces of analytical description:

In the first rank of these did Zimri stand. A man so various that he seemed to be Not one, but all mankind's epitome: Stiff in opinions, always in the wrong, Was everything by starts and nothing long; But in the course of one revolving moon Was chymist, fiddler, statesman and buffoon Then all for women, painting, rhyming, drink Besides ten thousand freaks that died in think

ST. JOHN'S HOSPITAL.-Few charita ble institutions have done so much good. in proportion to their means, as the hospital on Wilmington street, established by St. John's Guild and under its management. Within the past two years it has given shelter and aid to about twenty-five persons, who otherwise would have needed almost every comfort. The President of the Guild, Rev. Dr. Marshall, and Rev. Mr. Rich, are frequent visitors at the hospital, being assisted in their benevolent work by a number of ladies, among others by Miss Eliza Hill and Mrs. Rosa Ashe, who are well known to be not only kind but wise in the bestowal of charity, and Drs. Hines and Knox, physicians second to none in the State, give their services gratuitously. But our purpose is not to eulogize those who, we know, desire not human praise, but to direct the attention of our citizens to this deserving charity, and we mention these names only as a proof that any assistance will be wisely used. The hospital is in need of many things, and of course as its means increase it will be enabled to extend its charities. Food for the sick is always gladly received, and surely there are few who cannot spare an occasional meal to those who so much need it. Though the members of the Guild belong only to the Episcopal Church their aid is extended to all, and members of various churches have already

CENSUS NOTES:-Where Enumerators Shall File List of Inhabitants-Supervisor Cardwell, of the 2d Census District informs the enumerators under him, that, in conformity to the provisions of section 6 of the act of Congress, approved April 20th, 1880, the list of inhabitants to be filed in each county must be filed in the office of Register of Deeds. The county affairs being administered by a board of Commissioners, and the Register of Deeds being ex-officio clerk to the board, that officer is the proper custodian of these documents.

Closing Up Their Work-R. W. Best, clerk to Supervisor Cardwell, arrived in this city from Greensboro yesterday. He states that a goodly number of the enumerators will close the enumeration this week. and that next week the schedules will begin to come in. These will have to be closely scrutinized before they are transmitted to the census office at Washington. Exhibiting Business Talent-The daily reports of the 319 enumerators show that about ninety per cent. have exhibited over an average business talent, and the work will be done more accurately than ever be-

How NOT TO TRAIN A Dog.-Old man Bart Crowder, of Warren county, was one of the best men that ever lived and his plan of not teaching a dog to tree 'possums has some conspicuous advantages. Let "You see a gang of us had been out a hunting of 'possums and we had catched some five or six big ones and one tiny bit of a cuss. Well, long toads morning we come to a nice spring and we sat down thinking that as it was late we would take a small drink to keep the cold out. My cousin Lewis, which he was a hare-lipped man, had a dog along named "Stranger," which, I reckon, he was one of the most no-countest dogs as ever went into the woods, and as I was a feeling a little mischievious-like I named it to him, consin Lewis, says I, sposen we take and tie the least of these 'possums onto "Stranger's" tail and see if it won't learn him to bark at the tree. He thinking it might be the making of the dog, said he would do it and we skinned a sapling near by and tied the dog and the possum tail and tail. When we turged them loose Stranger looked around and when he see what it was we had done to him he gin one short yowl and he started. Cousin Lewis which as I have said he was a hare-lipped man named it to him, here! Stranger here but Lord bless your soul you mout as well a tried to stop a harricane with a broomstraw. He split a big crack in the air as he went out of sight heading for Abernethy's mill pond and if he ain't wore out the possum and didn't get drowned in the mill-pond he's a running yet".

The Charlotte Observer says that Charlotte's census takers will report less than 8,000 people.

The Economist says that Perquimans farmers are busy in their crops, with good prospects. Currituck crops have improved very much, and its watermelons are booming. Tyrrell's oats and wheat have suffered with rust; corn looks well; rice ditto: cotton very promising, with good stands.

NEW YORK CORRESPONDENCE.

[Correspondence of THE RALEIGH NEWS.] NEW YORK, June 18, 1880.

EDITOR NEWS:-I am always solicitous to put people who visit this city on their guard against the swindlers and confidence men who ply their trades in such plausible guise. Twice this week I have been accosted up town near Washington Park by strangers. The first said: "How do you do, Mr. Williams? When did you leave Boston?" "I left Boston about twenty-five years ago; but I am not Mr. Williams." "I beg a thousand pardons. I thought you were Mr. Williams, and that you had cut off your whiskers. I am stopping at the Brevoort House, and am Mr. —— " And he really looked as if he might be a denizen of that aristocratic establishment. The second man, and he did not look like the same kind of animal, accosted me this morning: "Did I not see you in Dr. Booth's church?" "No! I never was in Dr. Booth's church." beg pardon, Sir. I wanted to make an inquiry." I did not give my name to either of the polite gentlemen. If I had, perhaps the result might have been like that recorded in this morning's World, as fol-

"Dr. William B. S. Cauldwell, a druggist of New Bedford, Mass., was stopped yesterday at Fifty-fifth street and Broadway by a well-dressed man, who scized him cordially by the hand and exclaimed:-"Why, my old friend Watkins, I'm glad to see you." "A mistake, sir, I am Dr. Cauldwell, of New Bedford." "I hope you will excuse the mistake." [Exit No. 1. Enter No. 2.] "Dr. Cauldwell, how do you do? You have not been in town long, I hope. How is New Bedford, and are all our friends well?" "Really I do not remember you, though you seem to now me," said Dr. Cauldwell, remembersomething he had read in the papers. Well, its some time since I was in New Bedford, but you must know me, the nephew of Mr. Hathaway, President of the Bank of Commerce." Dr. Cauldwell knows Mr. Hathaway and knows that he has a nephew. He called Roundsman Price, who recognized Nephew Hathaway as a "banco steerer" and who soon caught No. 1 also. At Jefferson Market the prisoners, who were Peter Lack, alias "Grand Central Pete," and Joseph Smith, alias "Hungry Joe," were fined $10 each and sent to the workhouse for six months in default of $1,000 bail."

Mr. Dobbin once told me of a claim of acquaintance whilst he was Secretary of the Navy, by a yankee. He seemed to be surprised that Mr. Dobbin did not remember him. "I met you at Ray-ley," said he. "Oh no; I was never there. I have been in Raleigh, but no man who was ever there would pronounce it Ray-ley.' In Mrs. Spencer's list of books and pamphlets and papers presented to the Historical Society by Mr. W. S. Pearson and Mrs. M. M. Chambers, both of Morganton, which I find in vesterday's NEWS. is the agricultural address of Paul C. Cameron, Esq., in 1854. I well remember the impression it made upon me. Its admirable good sense, vigorous style, and of the State, induced us to copy it in the Fayetteville Observer. In all my experience I have no recollection of an address on that subject of equal merit except that of Mr. Webster at Rochester just after his return from England, how many years ago I do not recollect. In England Mr. Webster was pronounced "a steam engine in breeches." In his afterdinner speech at Rochester, when he had surpassed himself in the quantity of wine he had imbibed, he promised to "pay the National debt out of his own pocket. This morning's Times, ahead of all the other papers here, gives the result of your State Convention yesterday. I very heartily congratulate you and the party and the State, not only upon the action of this great body, as well as that of the several Congressional and Judicial Conventions, but also that everything seems to have been done decently and in order, with no such corruption or heart-burnings as made the Radical Convention at Chi-

Under the head of "Politics in the Pulpit," the Christian Union gives an account of a sermon before the graduating class of Brown University, Rhode Island, in which Garfield is described as "a man of unimpeached and unimpeachable character, of untarnished honor and unswerving fidelity to principle and duty"!! For particulars, pray turn to the Herald of this morning, and see how even that Radical paper proves, by Garfield's own testimony and that of his lawver, that he was a perjurer, and a defrauder of the Government as a member of the infamous

With no national convention, or division of parties, or thunderous campaign, waving of banners. waste of whisky, or tapping of barrels of money, it will quietly proceed, in every township or county of our broad land. Before September there will be an election of 250,000 common-school teachers to serve the country another year. These teachers. for the next twelve months, will be, by all odds, the most powerful body of people in the United States. They will do that sort of work which tells on the 5,000,000 common-school children of the country in a manner no other set of people can hope to rival. Any conclusion of the present campaign will be revised, within twenty years. by these 5,000,000 of school-children, and that revision will be largely in accordance with the type of character and intelligence wrought out by these 250,000 public servants, a large majority of them young women, who will quietly take their places, in the opening weeks of September, as teachers in the American common school.'

Gov. Seymour's Talks.

[As reported in New York Herald, 18th.] HORNELLSVILLE, N. Y., June 17 .-The train on the Erie road which left New York at nine o'clock this morning had on board, in special cars, the New Jersey delegation, a squad of Tammany democrats and a number of other delegates. At Elmira Horatio Seymour got on board. He had delivered an address before the female seminary at Aurora last night, and was on his way to Olean, where he owns considerable property. When it became known that he was on board a stream of delegates pressed through his car, shaking hands with him and cheering for the next President.

One delegate told Mr. Seymour that the Convention would nominate him anyway. and that the democracy would force him to accept.

The ex-Governor replied that his refusa to accept was unconditional and that he thought the sentiment of the party was in favor of younger and new men.

A NEW YORK MAN OUT OF THE QUESTION In conversation with a friend the ex-Governor expressed himself as follows:-"I really doubt the expediency of nominating any New York man. It would imperil success. There is too much feeling between the hostile factions. I have taken no part in the quarrels, and vet I should. f a candidate, have been unacceptable to some Democrats. I do not doubt that the true policy of the party is to take a younger and new man who is not in any way mixed up with the New York troubles. A strong man from Illinois would be expedient and available if they had one. This is not the time for an old man to run." At Corning Mr. Seymour was invited into the Jersey special car. He was introduced by Captain Isaiah Rynders, now Jerseyman, as the next President, whether he liked it or not. The ex-Governor was enthusiastically cheered. He

"I am much gratified to meet so many friends unexpectedly, but to what Captain Rynders has said I must reply that I am an old man without any desire for further public life, and I step aside and leave the nation in your younger and stronger hands. You need now a vigorous leader, and I most sincerely hope that by your wise action at the Convention you will unite the democracy in every section of the country and in every State of the Union. I have retired wholly from political life, but I sincerely hope to see the democracy's principles re-established in the government at this election. I wish you all happiness

A delegate replied-"You are the man to unite us, and we mean to have you yet." The ex-Governor is in excellent health and apparently as vigorous as any man on the train. He was accompanied by his brother, John F. Seymour.

Mr. Tilden at Cincinnati. [From the New York Herald, 18th.] There is no longer any doubt that Mr. Tilden intends to be a candidate. Of the delegates chosen a larger number will vote patriotic devotion to the interest and honor | for him on the first ballot than for any of estimate that we have seen gives him onethird of the delegates, and it requires twothirds to make a nomination. It is understood that his supporters will not, with Mr. Tilden's consent, indorse Bayard or Thurman or any candidate whom Mr. Tilden fancies has stood in his way. If he is able to carry out his purpose: the nominee will be Mr. Tilden himself or a dark horse selected by his instigation. While an admirable candidate in all other respects Mr. Bayard's stainless and irreproachable record would make him a peculiarly strong competitor against the head of the republican ticket.

Bishop McClosky, of the Roman Catholic Church. The bride is the daughter of the late Samuel Steele and widow of John Martin, perk merchant, of the firm of Martin, Bishop & Co., of this city. Gen. Chalmers and family, of Mississippi, were present. Senator Vance was accompanied by his youngest son. In a few days the bridal party will leave for New London, Connecticut, whence they will go to the White Sulphur Springs for the summer, and then return to Charlotte, North Caro-
